21. Questions

Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions that follow:

Mental health is no longer a silent issue. It is now one of the largest public health challenges facing the world, India included. According to an analysis from the “Global Burden of Disease Study” published in The Lancet, anxiety disorder patients in India increased by 123.5% from 1990 to 2023. It also pointed out that there has been a steep rise in the cases of depressive disorder and anxiety after Covid-19. However, they are more than just numbers. Behind every number is a person struggling with stress, fear, loneliness, burnout, sleep problems or emotional pain. Many are students, young professionals, working parents and elderly people trying to cope quietly every day. The study also points out an important reality -- mental disorders are now one of the leading causes of disability across the world, even more than many major physical illnesses. This should make all of us pause and rethink how we look at mental health in India. To its credit, the government of India has recognised this growing crisis.

The Union Budget 2026-27 has placed a stronger focus on expanding mental health and trauma care infrastructure. This is an important and welcome step. However, infrastructure alone will not solve the problem. India certainly needs more hospitals, more counselling centres and more trained mental health professionals. We also need to focus on prevention, early support and community-based care. Mental health can no longer remain limited to big cities or specialised hospitals. One of the biggest concerns is that mental health problems are increasing most rapidly among teenagers and young adults. This is a very sensitive stage of life where emotional health shapes education, relationships, confidence and future careers. Unfortunately, many young people today are growing up under constant pressure. Academic competition, social media comparison, financial insecurity, loneliness and lack of emotional communication inside families are affecting mental well-being deeply.

Many children are connected online all day but emotionally disconnected in real life. Anxiety and depression have also increased among women in the post-pandemic years due to emotional stress, responsibilities at home, work-related pressure, and societal demands. Chronic anxiety and depression can disturb sleep, concentration, memory and overall quality of life. Long-term stress may also increase the risk of headaches, hypertension, stroke risk factors, and other neurological problems indirectly through lifestyle changes. India, therefore, needs a much broader mental health movement. Mental health education should begin in schools. Every school and college should have access to trained counsellors. Even at the workplace, conversations around burnout, anxiety and emotional fatigue need to be normalised. Primary healthcare doctors should receive basic mental health training so that early symptoms are recognised before conditions become severe. At the community level, we must reduce stigma. Even today, many families hesitate to seek psychiatric help because of fear, shame or social judgement.

Mental illness should be treated like any other health condition -- without embarrassment. Technology can also play a major role. Tele-consultations, digital counselling platforms, and regional-language mental health services can improve access in smaller towns and rural India, where specialists remain limited. More importantly, we need to realise that mental well-being is also connected with issues such as education, job prospects, social welfare, family matters, and the economy. A country cannot progress without ensuring the mental well-being of its people. India is on the right track by taking the first step in terms of policy and funding. The next step would be implementation on the ground. Mental well-being needs to become affordable, available, and acceptable for all Indians. This way, India will emerge as a better nation.

According to the Global Burden of Disease Study cited in the passage, by how much did anxiety disorder cases in India increase between 1990 and 2023?

- a. By 123.5 per cent, reflecting a more than doubling of anxiety disorder patients
- b. By 213.5 per cent, making it the fastest-growing mental health condition globally
- c. By 23.5 per cent, indicating a modest rise over three decades
- d. By 100 per cent, meaning cases exactly doubled during the period
- e. By 323.5 per cent, indicating a more than threefold increase since 1990

22. Questions

The passage says many young people are 'connected online all day but emotionally disconnected in real life.' What does this mean?

- a. Young people spend too much time on online games and have forgotten how to use social media meaningfully
- b. Despite constant digital connectivity, young people lack genuine emotional bonds and face loneliness in their real relationships
- c. Young people prefer online friendships over real ones because digital communication is faster and more convenient
- d. Children who use the internet excessively develop an inability to concentrate in classrooms
- e. Online connectivity has made young people more confident in virtual settings but fearful in public spaces

23. Questions

Which of the following physical health conditions is mentioned in the passage as being linked to long-term mental stress?

- a. Diabetes and obesity
- b. Joint pain, arthritis, and bone density loss
- c. Respiratory diseases and weakened immunity
- d. Headaches, hypertension, and stroke risk factors
- e. Vision problems and hearing impairment

24. Questions

According to the passage, what role can technology play in improving mental health access in India?

- a. Technology can replace all human therapists, making mental healthcare completely automated and cost-free
- b. Tele-consultations, digital counselling platforms, and regional-language services can improve access in smaller towns and rural areas where specialists are limited
- c. Technology can be used to monitor social media usage of teenagers and alert parents about mental health risks
- d. Apps can diagnose mental health conditions more accurately than trained psychiatrists
- e. Technology will make urban mental health services so efficient that rural populations will travel to cities for care

- b. Only B-C
- c. Only B-D
- d. Both A-D and B-C
- e. No replacement required

Explanations:

1. Questions

Answer: B

(A) Incorrect: This is a conditional sentence (Type 3) error. In Type 3 conditionals (hypothetical past situations), the "if" clause should use past perfect ("had implemented"), not "would have" - should be "If the bank had implemented stricter verification measures, the fraud could have been prevented." ("Would have" is never used in the if-clause; it belongs only in the main clause.)

(B) Correct: "The new branch, which is located near the main market, has attracted a large number of customers since its opening." - the relative clause ("which is located...") is correctly used, subject-verb agreement is intact ("branch...has attracted"), and "since its opening" correctly pairs with the present perfect tense.

(C) Incorrect: This is a noun-number agreement error. "One of the major reason" - since it's "one of the major [plural noun]," the noun must be plural - should be "One of the major reasons for the delay..."

2. Questions

Answer: E

(A) Incorrect: This is a dangling modifier error. "Having completed the audit successfully" should logically refer to the person/team who completed it, but the sentence structure makes it appear that "the report" completed the audit - should be "Having completed the audit successfully, the finance team submitted the report to senior management."

(B) Incorrect: This is a parallelism error with the "not only...but also" construction. Both parts must follow the same grammatical structure. "not only beneficial" (adjective) doesn't parallel "but also attracts" (verb) - should be "not only beneficial for existing customers but also attractive to new investors" (or "not only benefits existing customers but also attracts new investors").

(C) Incorrect: This is an incorrect comparative construction. When comparing two candidates, the correct structure is "more qualified than", not "the more qualified than." The article "the" should not be used before the comparative adjective in this construction. Therefore, the correct form is: "Of the two candidates interviewed for the post, she is more qualified than the other candidate for the position."

3. Questions

Answer: A

(A) Correct: "By the time the branch manager arrived, the customers had already left" - correct use of past perfect tense ("had left") for the action that happened first, followed by simple past ("arrived") for the later action. This sequencing is grammatically accurate.

(B) Incorrect: "well versed on the banking software" - this is a preposition error. The correct phrase is "well versed in" something, not "well versed on."

(C) Incorrect: "has been working in this bank since three years" - this is a preposition error involving duration. "Since" is used with a specific point in time (e.g., "since 2020"), while "for" is used with a duration/period - should be "for three years."

4. Questions

Answer: B

(A) Incorrect: "The employees, along with their supervisor, was asked" - the subject is "the employees" (plural); "along with their supervisor" is a parenthetical phrase and doesn't change the verb's agreement - should be "were asked."

(B) Correct: "most of the customers were satisfied" - "customers" is plural, correctly paired with "were." Tense and structure are accurate throughout.

(C) Incorrect: "Each of the applicants are required" - "Each" is always singular, regardless of the plural noun that follows it - should be "is required."

5. Questions

Answer: B

(A) Incorrect: "insisted that every employee submits" - after verbs like insist, demand, suggest, recommend (expressing a command/requirement), the subjunctive mood requires the base form of the verb, regardless of subject - should be "every employee submit" (not "submits").

(B) Correct: "Owing to the heavy rainfall, several flights were delayed..." - correct cause-effect structure, subject-verb agreement ("flights were delayed"), and passive construction are all properly used.

(C) Incorrect: "revised it's policy" - "it's" is a contraction of "it is," but here a possessive is needed - should be "its policy" (no apostrophe).

6. Questions

Answer: A

Matching the Columns

A-D: In its latest update, the IMF projected that global growth will stabilize at 3.0 percent despite persistent war shocks.

The noun clause introduced by "that" has a clear singular subject ("global growth") paired correctly with the future modal verb phrase ("will stabilize"). The preposition "despite" correctly introduces a noun phrase contrast ("persistent war shocks").

This accurately mirrors economic reporting regarding global growth projections amidst geopolitical tensions.

B-E: "Investment in artificial intelligence infrastructure are expanding to almost 800 billion dollars by the end of the fiscal year."

This sentence contains a Subject-Verb Agreement error. The true subject of the sentence is the singular noun "Investment," not the plural object of the preposition "infrastructure." Therefore, the verb must be singular.

Correct form: "Investment in artificial intelligence infrastructure is expanding..."

C-F: "Although central banks want to lowering interest rates, sticky inflation figures have forced them to remain patient."

This sentence contains an Infinitive Verb Form error. The infinitive marker "to" must always be followed by the base form of the verb, not the gerund or present participle (-ing) form.

Correct form: "Although central banks want to lower interest rates..."

The other combinations do not form a coherent sentence with a clear connection between the ideas presented in Column I and Column II.

Correct Answer: a) Only A-D

7. Questions

Answer: B

Matching the Columns

A-E: The Ministry of Corporate Affairs extended the validity of the Companies Compliance Facilitation Scheme until August 31 to provide additional time for statutory filings following a data centre fire.

This sentence follows a standard active voice timeline layout (Subject + Verb + Object + Time Phrase). The infinitive phrase "to provide" correctly shows purpose. This accurately reflects the Ministry's decision to extend compliance relief following data centre restoration activities.

B-F: India's retail inflation accelerated to 4.38% in June breaching the Reserve Bank of India's medium-term target of 4%.

This sentence utilizes a present participle clause ("breaching...") to introduce the immediate, direct consequence of the main clause. This matches the Consumer Price Index data where inflation moved back above the RBI's baseline comfort zone.

C-D: "The Reserve Bank of India injected short-term liquidity into the banking system resulting from outflows related to advance tax payments had reduced the surplus."

This sentence suffers from a run-on structure and a double verb error. By keeping the auxiliary verb phrase "had reduced," phrase D leaves the sentence without a cohesive conjunction or relative pronoun to connect it to the main clause.

Correct form: "...into the banking system because outflows related to advance tax payments had reduced the surplus."

@RankZenBanker

The other combinations do not form a coherent sentence with a clear connection between the ideas presented in Column I and Column II.

Correct Answer: b) Both A-E and B-F

8. Questions

Answer: C

Matching the Columns

A-F: The volatility of the financial market demands that investors remain highly adaptable.

The subject "volatility" is singular, so the singular verb "demands" is correctly used. The sentence is grammatically correct and contextually appropriate, as fluctuations in financial markets require investors to adjust their strategies accordingly.

B-E: "No sooner had the notification been released when thousands of candidates visited the official website."

This sentence violates the rule of correlative conjunctions. The introductory negative phrase "No sooner" must be paired with "than", not "when."

Correct form: "No sooner had the notification been released than thousands of candidates..."

C-D: She is one of those dedicated employees who always complete their assignments ahead of schedule.

In the structure "one of those + plural noun + who/that," the relative pronoun refers to the plural noun ("employees"). Therefore, the verb that follows must be plural ("complete", not completes) and the pronoun must be plural ("their", not her). A grammatically flawless statement praising professional efficiency.

The other combinations do not form a coherent sentence with a clear connection between the ideas presented in Column I and Column II.

Correct Answer: c) Both A-F and C-D

9. Questions

Answer: D

Matching the Columns

A-E: The evolving changes in international trade policies are expected to affect domestic market prices significantly.

The true subject is "changes" (plural), not "policies" or "trade." The plural verb "are" correctly matches the plural head noun. Additionally, the verb "affect" (to influence) is correctly used instead of the noun "effect." Describes a realistic, straightforward economic causation.

B-D: The higher the volatility in the stock market, the greater the premium investors demand for risky assets.

This follows the "The + comparative..., the + comparative..." parallel construction pattern perfectly (The higher... the greater...). A sound financial principle stating that higher risk demands a higher return or premium.

C-F: The board of directors mandated that the firm maintain a high liquidity ratio during the financial crisis.

This sentence utilizes the Subjunctive Mood. After verbs of command, requirement, or mandate (mandated that), the following clause must use the base form of the verb ("maintain"), regardless of the singular subject ("the firm"). The use of "maintains" or "should maintain" would be incorrect here. A highly contextual corporate governance scenario.

The other combinations do not form a coherent sentence with a clear connection between the ideas presented in Column I and Column II.

Correct Answer: d) All A-E, B-D and C-F

10. Questions

Answer: C

Matching the Columns

A-D: The dynamic nature of modern global markets demands that companies constantly adapt their business models.

The true subject is the singular noun phrase "The dynamic nature" (not the plural "markets"). It correctly agrees with the singular verb "demands." Connects market reality with a logical corporate requirement.

B-E: "Although the new regulations were strict, yet the financial institutions managed to maintain their profit margins."

This sentence contains a redundancy error with conjunctions. The subordinating conjunction "Although" is sufficient to show contrast on its own. Pairing it with "yet" or "but" in the second clause is incorrect in formal English.

Correct form: "Although the new regulations were strict, the financial institutions managed to..." (simply drop the word yet).

C-F: She is one of those dedicated managers who prioritize employee well-being above corporate targets.

This follows the "one of those... who/that" rule. The relative pronoun "who" refers back to the plural antecedent "managers." Therefore, the verb must be plural ("prioritize", not "prioritizes"). Describes a specific leadership style.

The other combinations do not form a coherent sentence with a clear connection between the ideas presented in Column I and Column II.

Correct Answer: c) Both A-D and C-F

11. Questions

Answer: C

While going through the passage, only arrangement (c) makes a contextually meaningful sentence. The sentence thus formed is: India continues to pursue balanced development by promoting clean energy, strengthening energy security, encouraging digital innovation, and supporting infrastructure improvements that contribute to inclusive growth and long-term national progress. @RankZenBanker

Logic of arrangement:

A - "India continues to pursue balanced development" - clear subject + main verb, opens the sentence

C - "by promoting clean energy, strengthening energy security," - the how (means/method), introduced by "by"

B - "encouraging digital innovation, and supporting infrastructure" - continues the list of parallel gerund phrases started in C

D - "improvements that contribute to inclusive growth" - "improvements" completes "supporting infrastructure improvements"; the relative clause follows naturally

E - "and long-term national progress" - final conjunct, closes the sentence with a parallel noun phrase alongside "inclusive growth"

12. Questions

Answer: D

E-C-B-D-A: ISRO has achieved another important milestone in the Gaganyaan programme by successfully validating key crew module systems, reinforcing confidence in mission safety and advancing India's preparations for its first human spaceflight mission.

The sentence begins with E, as it contains the subject "ISRO" and the main verb "has achieved," making it the logical opening.

C follows E because “in the Gaganyaan programme by successfully validating” explains the context and method of achieving the milestone.

B follows C because “key crew module systems” completes the phrase “successfully validating key crew module systems.”

D follows B because “reinforcing confidence in mission safety and advancing India's preparations for” continues the consequences of the successful validation.

A completes the sentence with “its first human spaceflight mission,” which correctly follows “India's preparations for.”

The correct sequence is therefore E-C-B-D-A.

13. Questions

Answer: C

While going through the passage, only arrangement (c) makes a contextually meaningful sentence. The sentence thus formed is: India's economy remains supported by strong domestic demand, although policymakers continue to monitor inflation, global energy prices, and supply-chain challenges to maintain macroeconomic stability and encourage sustainable long-term economic expansion.

Logic of arrangement:

C - "India's economy remains supported by strong domestic demand," - opens with the main subject and positive assertion; comma signals a contrast/concession coming

D - "although policymakers continue to monitor inflation," - introduces the concessive clause with "although"; comma continues the list

A - "global energy prices, and supply-chain challenges" - completes the list of what policymakers are monitoring (inflation + these items)

B - "to maintain macroeconomic stability and encourage" - the purpose/infinitive phrase explaining why they monitor

E - "sustainable long-term economic expansion" - the final object of "encourage," closing the sentence neatly

14. Questions

Answer: E

The sentence is correct, hence no rearrangement required.

Logic of arrangement:

A - "International efforts to strengthen global health security" - the main subject of the sentence

B - "continue through discussions on pandemic preparedness," - the main verb + begins the list of discussion topics

C - "equitable access to medical resources, and cooperative frameworks designed" - continues the list and introduces the next modifier

D - "to improve coordination, resilience, and emergency response" - infinitive phrase modifying "frameworks designed"

E - "during future public health challenges" - adverbial phrase closing the sentence with time/context

The sentence is already logically ordered as given.

The sentence is: International efforts to strengthen global health security continue through discussions on pandemic preparedness, equitable access to medical resources, and cooperative frameworks designed to improve coordination, resilience, and emergency response during future public health challenges.

15. Questions

Answer: A

While going through the passage, only arrangement (a) makes a contextually meaningful sentence. The sentence thus formed is: India remains one of the fastest-growing major economies, supported by strong domestic demand, while policymakers continue to balance inflation management, investment growth, and fiscal stability to sustain long-term economic resilience.

Logic of arrangement:

A - "India remains one of the fastest-growing major economies," - main clause, natural opening subject

D - "supported by strong domestic demand," - participial phrase modifying India's growth, immediately qualifies A

B - "while policymakers continue to balance inflation management," - introduces a contrasting/parallel action with "while"

C - "investment growth, and fiscal stability" - continues the list of what policymakers are balancing (completes B's list)

E - "to sustain long-term economic resilience" - infinitive phrase showing the purpose, fits as a closing thought

16. Questions

Answer: E

The sentence reads: "SBI Research's latest Ecowrap report noted that retail inflation climbed to 4.38% in June 2026, and it further cautioned that a stable rupee will be critical in preventing imported inflation from spilling over into domestic prices."

First blank: A research report presenting a factual data point (inflation figures) requires a neutral reporting verb, matching "noted" (stated or observed as a fact). "Concealed" and "dismissed" both contradict the act of a report openly presenting data.

Second blank: The report going on to flag a risk about the rupee's stability fits "cautioned" (warned about a potential concern). "Speculated" implies guesswork rather than a reasoned risk assessment based on the report's own data, and "denied" contradicts the idea of raising a concern altogether.

Hence, 3 (noted) and 1 (cautioned) - Option (e).

17. Questions

Answer: A

The sentence reads: "The India-UK Free Trade Agreement, entering into force from July 15, 2026, is expected to exempt nearly 99% of Indian exports from duties, according to Commerce Minister Piyush Goyal."

First blank: The standard fixed phrase for a treaty or agreement officially taking legal effect is "enter into force," making "entering" the correct fit. "Coming" and "bringing" do not form this recognized fixed collocation with "into force."

Second blank: Removing duties on exports requires a verb meaning to free something from an obligation, matching "exempt" (to free from a duty/requirement). "Restrict" and "impose" both suggest adding a duty burden, directly contradicting the benefit of zero-duty access described in the sentence.

Hence, 3 (entering) and 4 (exempt) - Option (a).

18. Questions

Answer: E

The sentence reads: "The World Bank has pledged to mobilise $4.2 billion in private financing and will provide an $890 million package to accelerate rooftop solar adoption under the PM Surya Ghar scheme."

First blank: "Pledged" is correct because it means formally promised or committed to a specific financial target. "Denied" is grammatically unsuitable before "to mobilise" because deny is normally followed by a gerund, as in "denied mobilising," not an infinitive. "Refused" is grammatically possible with "to mobilise," but it contradicts the positive context of the World Bank's financial commitment.

Second blank: Delivering a stated financial package to support a scheme fits "provide" (to supply or make available). "Withdraw" and "recover" both mean taking funds back, which contradicts the sentence's context of supporting solar adoption through a package.

Hence, 3 (pledged) and 4 (provide) - Option (e).

19. Questions

Answer: D

The sentence reads: "The ONGC board has cleared the addition of 1.75 million tons of crude storage capacity in Mangalore, a move that will strengthen the company's strategic reserves amid ongoing geopolitical uncertainty."

First blank: A board formally approving a capacity expansion plan requires "cleared" (officially approved or gave the go-ahead to). "Rejected" and "contested" both mean opposing or disputing the plan, which directly contradicts the addition of capacity actually going ahead.

Second blank: Adding storage capacity to crude reserves logically results in a positive outcome for those reserves, matching "strengthen" (to make stronger or more robust). "Deplete" and "undermine" both suggest weakening or reducing the reserves, which contradicts the idea of adding more capacity.

Hence, 1 (cleared) and 4 (strengthen) - Option (d).

20. Questions

Answer: D

The sentence reads: "The revised MSME Ministry guidelines mandate all operating CPSEs to settle procurement invoices through RBI-regulated TReDS platforms, a step intended to eliminate delays in payments to small enterprises."

First blank: Guidelines requiring CPSEs to compulsorily follow a specific payment platform need "mandate" (to officially require or compel). "Permit" only implies allowing an option, not a compulsory requirement, and "discourage" contradicts the act of directing CPSEs toward a specific platform.

Second blank: A step aimed at fixing the problem of delayed payments to small enterprises requires "eliminate" (to remove or do away with entirely). "Facilitate" would wrongly suggest the guidelines are making the delays easier rather than removing them, and "tolerate" directly contradicts a corrective step being taken.

Hence, 1 (mandate) and 4 (eliminate) - Option (d).

21. Questions

Answer: A

a). Correct. The passage directly states: 'anxiety disorder patients in India increased by 123.5% from 1990 to 2023' - a more than doubling of cases over the 33-year period.

b). Incorrect. 213.5 per cent is not the figure cited. The passage states 123.5 per cent. No claim about it being the fastest-growing condition globally is made.

c). Incorrect. 23.5 per cent is a fraction of the actual figure. The passage clearly states the increase was 123.5 per cent - a much sharper rise.

@RankZenBanker

d). Incorrect. 100 per cent would mean cases exactly doubled. The actual figure is 123.5 per cent - a rise beyond doubling.

e). Incorrect. 323.5 per cent is a significantly inflated figure not mentioned anywhere in the passage.

22. Questions

a). Incorrect. The passage does not distinguish between online games and social media. The point is about the gap between digital presence and genuine emotional connection - not about what type of online activity they engage in.

b). Correct. The passage identifies 'loneliness and lack of emotional communication inside families' as factors affecting mental well-being. The line about being connected online but emotionally disconnected captures this paradox - technology gives access to the world but cannot substitute for real human emotional bonds.

c). Incorrect. The passage does not say young people prefer online relationships over real ones by choice. The emotional disconnection is presented as a problem, not a preference.

d). Incorrect. Concentration in classrooms is not the point being made here. The passage is about emotional disconnection in relationships, not attention span in academic settings.

e). Incorrect. Fear in public spaces is not mentioned. The passage is about the absence of emotional depth in real relationships - not about social anxiety in public.

23. Questions

Answer: D

- a). Incorrect. Diabetes and obesity are not mentioned in the passage as consequences of long-term stress.
- b). Incorrect. Joint pain, arthritis, and bone density issues are not mentioned anywhere in the passage.
- c). Incorrect. Respiratory diseases and weakened immunity are not cited as consequences of mental stress in this passage.
- d). Correct. The passage directly states: 'Long-term stress may also increase the risk of headaches, hypertension, stroke risk factors, and other neurological problems indirectly through lifestyle changes.'
- e). Incorrect. Vision and hearing problems are not discussed as outcomes of long-term stress in the passage.

24. Questions

Answer: B

- a). Incorrect. The passage does not suggest technology replaces human therapists. It presents tele-consultations and digital platforms as tools to improve access - not as substitutes for professional care.
- b). Correct. The passage directly states: 'Tele-consultations, digital counselling platforms, and regional-language mental health services can improve access in smaller towns and rural India, where specialists remain limited.'
- c). Incorrect. Social media monitoring and parental alert systems are not mentioned as a role for technology in the passage.
- d). Incorrect. The passage does not claim technology can diagnose mental health conditions more accurately than psychiatrists. Apps and platforms are mentioned as access tools, not diagnostic replacements.
- e). Incorrect. The passage advocates bringing mental health services to rural areas through technology - not encouraging rural populations to travel to cities.

25. Questions

Answer: D

- a). Incorrect as a 'NOT cited' choice. 'Academic competition' is directly listed in the passage: 'Academic competition, social media comparison, financial insecurity, loneliness and lack of emotional communication inside families are affecting mental well-being deeply.'
- b). Incorrect as a 'NOT cited' choice. 'Social media comparison' is explicitly mentioned as one of the contributing factors in the same sentence.
- c). Incorrect as a 'NOT cited' choice. 'Financial insecurity' is directly cited in the passage as a factor affecting young people's mental well-being.
- d). Correct - this is NOT mentioned. Lack of access to sports or physical activity is never cited in the passage as a factor contributing to mental health problems among young people. The passage focuses on academic, social, emotional, and financial pressures.

e). Incorrect as a 'NOT cited' choice. 'Loneliness and lack of emotional communication inside families' are directly cited in the same list of contributing factors.

26. Questions

a). Cost Incorrect. 'Stigma' has nothing to do with financial cost. The passage mentions families hesitating due to fear, shame, and social judgement - all of which relate to social perception, not expense.

b). A mark of shame or disgrace associated with a condition or behaviour Correct. 'Stigma' means a strong sense of social disapproval or shame attached to a condition. In the passage, it refers to the social embarrassment and judgement that prevents families from seeking psychiatric help. The passage immediately explains the stigma by listing fear, shame, and social judgement as its components.

c). Lack of awareness about treatment options Incorrect. Lack of awareness is a separate problem from stigma. Stigma refers to the negative social attitude toward mental illness - families may be aware of treatment but avoid it due to shame, which is the stigma itself.

d). Physical symptom of a mental illness Incorrect. In medical contexts, 'stigmata' can refer to physical marks, but 'stigma' in this social context refers to shame and social judgement - not a physical symptom.

e). Government regulation of healthcare Incorrect. Government regulation is entirely unrelated to the meaning of 'stigma'. The passage uses it to describe a social and cultural barrier, not a policy or regulatory concept.

27. Questions

@RankZenBanker

a). Made illegal or restricted Incorrect. 'Normalised' means the opposite - making something accepted and common, not restricting it.

b). Made compulsory for all employees Incorrect. 'Normalised' does not mean mandatory. Making conversations about mental health normal means creating an environment where people feel free to have them - not legally requiring them.

c). Converted into numerical data for analysis Incorrect. This describes a statistical or data process ('normalisation' in mathematics). The passage uses 'normalised' in its social/cultural sense - making something accepted - not in any technical data sense.

d). Transferred to a different department or authority Incorrect. Transfer of authority is entirely unrelated to the meaning of 'normalised' in this context.

e). Made to seem ordinary, acceptable, and no longer taboo Correct. To 'normalise' something means to make it a normal, accepted part of everyday life - removing the awkwardness, embarrassment, or social taboo attached to it. In the passage, normalising conversations about burnout and anxiety at the workplace means making it acceptable to discuss these issues openly without fear of judgement.

28. Questions

Answer: C

Swap B-C.

In the given sentence, 'deserted' and 'golden' at their current positions fail to impart valid meaning to the sentence, but interchanging them will make the given sentence both grammatically and contextually correct.

The correct sentence after re arrangement is: The restless wind scattered the golden leaves across the deserted street while an old man sat silently watching from his crumbling doorstep without uttering a single word.

So, the correct answer is: c) Only B-C

29. Questions

Answer: A

Swap A-C

In the given sentence, 'explore' and 'display' at their current positions fail to impart valid meaning to the sentence, but interchanging them will make the given sentence both grammatically and contextually correct.

The correct sentence after re arrangement is: The museum plans to display several rare artifacts in a newly renovated gallery, allowing visitors to explore the collection more comfortably.

So, the correct answer is: a) Only A-C

30. Questions

Answer: E

@RankZenBanker

The sentence is correct, hence no replacement required.

The correct sentence is: The company decided to extend the deadline after receiving an unexpected request from several clients facing technical issues during the registration process.

So, the correct answer is: e) No replacement required

31. Questions

Answer: D

Swap A-B and C-D

In the given sentence, 'compelling' and 'professor' at their current positions fail to impart valid meaning to the sentence, as well as, 'intellectual' and 'moral' at their current positions fail to impart valid meaning to the sentence, but interchanging them will make the given sentence both grammatically and contextually correct.

The correct sentence after re arrangement is: The elderly professor delivered a compelling lecture on the moral consequences of scientific discoveries that forever changed the intellectual landscape of modern philosophy.

So, the correct answer is: d) Both A-B and C-D

32. Questions

Answer: B

Swap B-C

In the given sentence, 'tattered' and 'treacherous' at their current positions fail to impart valid meaning to the sentence, but interchanging them will make the given sentence both grammatically and contextually correct.

The correct sentence after re arrangement is: The young explorer ventured into a treacherous canyon armed with only a tattered map and an unwavering determination to locate the long-lost hidden treasure.

So, the correct answer is: b) Only B-C
