21. Questions

In the following question, a passage has been given and followed by several questions. You are required to answer the questions based on the information provided in the passage.

For decades, India's social contract rested on an assumption that required little intervention from the state: families would care for their elderly. Public policy focused on pensions, healthcare and poverty because emotional support, companionship and day-to-day caregiving were presumed to come from within the household. That assumption is now under strain, and nowhere is the change more visible than in Kerala. The state's demographic profile places it at the forefront of a transition that the rest of India will eventually experience. Longer life expectancy, declining fertility and sustained migration have produced a society where parents increasingly outlive the traditional family structure that once sustained them. Their children have not necessarily abandoned them.

Many have moved elsewhere in pursuit of education, employment or better incomes. Yet the result is the same: ageing parents find themselves alone even when they remain financially secure. [A1] This [P] distinction is significant because it [Q] challenge the nature of the policy [R] changes. Financial assistance can pay bills, but it cannot accompany an elderly person to a hospital at midnight, repair a leaking roof, collect medicines or simply provide conversation after days of isolation. Loneliness has emerged as a public issue rather than merely a private sorrow. It carries consequences for mental health, physical well-being and healthcare costs that governments can no longer afford to ignore. Kerala's decision to create a dedicated institutional framework for elderly welfare reflects an important recognition that ageing is not solely a health or welfare issue. It intersects with urban planning, housing, transport, technology, labour markets and community development. The emphasis on enabling older citizens to remain in their own homes for as long as possible mirrors a growing international consensus that institutional care should be the last option, not the default one.

Yet policy announcements alone cannot compensate for weakening social bonds. A successful ageing strategy requires trained caregivers, regulated senior-care providers, accessible neighbourhood health services, emergency response systems and vibrant community networks. It also demands local governments that treat elderly welfare as an everyday administrative responsibility rather than an occasional welfare programme. Without sustained investment and clear regulatory standards, ambitious plans risk becoming symbolic exercises. The implications extend far beyond Kerala. States such as Tamil Nadu, Himachal Pradesh, Punjab and even parts of urban Maharashtra are moving along similar demographic trajectories. Migration continues to reshape Indian families, while falling birth rates mean fewer adult children will be available to share caregiving responsibilities in the decades ahead. India's demographic dividend, celebrated for years, is gradually giving way to the realities of demographic ageing. The real test of a society is not how it treats its young and productive citizens, but how it supports those who have already contributed a lifetime of work. As India's population grows older, the country's social contract must evolve from one that assumes families will always cope to one that ensures no citizen is left to navigate old age alone. Kerala's experiment is therefore an early glimpse of India's future.

According to the passage, why has loneliness among the elderly become a public policy issue?

- a. Because it affects mental and physical well-being and increases pressure on public services.
- b. Because most elderly citizens no longer receive any financial assistance from the government.
- c. Because older people have collectively rejected institutional support in favour of isolation.
- d. Because healthcare expenditure has replaced all other forms of public welfare spending.
- e. Both A and B

22. Questions

Which of the following statements is/are CORRECT according to the passage?

Answer: A

The correct plural of “index” is “indices.”

20. Questions

Answer: B

The correct plural of “wolf” is “wolves.”

21. Questions

Answer: A

The passage explains that loneliness is no longer merely a private emotional experience. It has broader consequences, including mental health issues, poorer physical health, and higher healthcare costs, making it a matter of public policy.

- Option B: The passage explicitly states that many elderly people remain financially secure.
- Option C: The passage never suggests that elderly citizens voluntarily choose isolation or reject institutional support.
- Option D: No comparison is made regarding government expenditure replacing other welfare programmes.

22. Questions

Answer: C

Statement I: The passage states that ageing intersects with housing, transport, technology, labour markets and community development.

Statement II: The passage clearly says institutional care should be the last option, not the default one.

Statement III: Migration for education and employment has resulted in many elderly parents living alone.

23. Questions

Answer: D

The author repeatedly argues that ageing requires broader policy responses, including caregiving, community networks, emergency services and urban planning.

@RankZen Banker

- Option A: The author warns that policy announcements alone are insufficient.
- Option B: The passage does not predict the complete disappearance of joint families.
- Option C: Institutional care is presented as a last resort rather than the preferred option.

24. Questions

Answer: E

The concluding paragraph argues that India's traditional assumption- that families alone will care for the elderly- is no longer sufficient.

- Option A: The passage explicitly states that money cannot replace companionship and caregiving.

- Option B: The author advocates complementing families, not replacing them.
- Option C: Several other states are specifically mentioned as following similar demographic trends.

25. Questions

Answer: A

In the passage, "sustained migration" means migration that has continued over a long period. "Temporary" conveys something short-lived, making it the opposite of sustained.

- Option B: "Continuous" is similar in meaning to sustained.
- Option C: "Persistent" also denotes continuity.
- Option D: "Enduring" implies lasting for a long time.

26. Questions

Answer: B

In the passage, "moving along similar demographic trajectories" refers to following a similar course or direction of demographic change.

- Option A: "Obstacle" refers to a hindrance.
- Option D: A limitation denotes restriction.
- Option E: An interval means a gap or period of time.

27. Questions

Answer: A

The author stresses that money can pay bills but cannot replace companionship, caregiving, or practical help, such as accompanying someone to a hospital or collecting medicines.

- Option B: The passage never links financial independence with reluctance to seek healthcare.
- Option C: The author never claims technology has reduced the importance of emotional support.
- Option D: The passage supports pensions as useful but insufficient; it never recommends replacing them.
- Option E: Financially secure elderly people may still require social, medical and community support.

28. Questions

Answer: E

In the passage, presumed means something accepted as true without requiring proof. "Assumed" is the closest synonym in this context.

- Option A: "Established" indicates something already firmly proven or recognised.
- Option B: "Confirmed" means proven through evidence.
- Option C: "Demonstrated" implies showing something through proof or action.
- Option D: "Verified" refers to checking factual accuracy.

29. Questions
