16. Questions

In the given question, sentences are given in jumbled form. Rearrange them in proper order and answer the questions that follow.

Rearrange the following sentences to form a coherent paragraph:

- A). The Ministry launched the Yoga Park Portal, a nationwide digital platform designed to transform existing public parks into community wellness hubs focused on yoga, meditation, and preventive healthcare.
- B). The Ministry of Ayush has long been working to promote traditional Indian health practices, and its latest initiative takes this mission directly into the heart of communities across the country.
- C). Through this platform, local bodies, non-governmental organisations, resident welfare associations, and corporate entities can register their parks and receive guidelines and implementation resources to convert them into active wellness spaces.
- D). The portal was launched during the International Day of Yoga countdown event in Khajuraho by the Minister of State for Ayush, and it complements the already existing Yoga Sangam Portal.
- E). The initiative reflects the government's broader effort to shift India's healthcare focus from treatment to prevention, encouraging citizens to adopt yoga and meditation as part of their daily lives for long-term well-being.

21. Questions

@RankZen Banker

Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions that follow:

Urban India has changed dramatically over the past few decades. Our cities are more prosperous, our homes more comfortable, and our lifestyles more modern than those of previous generations. Yet beneath this visible progress, some older attitudes continue to survive in ways that are often difficult to acknowledge. A few recent discussions within my own residential society brought this reality into sharp focus. One discussion centred around a domestic worker who had left a part-time arrangement to accept a full-time position elsewhere. The response from some residents was revealing. There was an expectation that the community should somehow regulate such movement, as though the worker's freedom to choose a better opportunity was negotiable. The same discussion produced another suggestion that was even more troubling.

Some residents argued that domestic workers should not use the same lifts as apartment owners. The argument was presented as practicality and convenience. Yet beneath it lay an assumption that certain people, despite working there every day, somehow belonged to a different category. Another discussion arose when a resident discovered that the husbands of certain domestic workers employed in the society had criminal records. The concern for safety was understandable. What puzzled me, however, was the assumption that the actions of those men somehow cast suspicion upon the women themselves. We routinely argue that individuals should be judged on their own merits, yet that principle often appears to weaken when applied across social and economic boundaries. What struck me was not the existence of such views, but the fact that they were expressed by educated, successful, and professionally accomplished individuals.

Economic progress, it seems, does not automatically eliminate social prejudice. Perhaps this is because many forms of discrimination no longer present themselves openly. They survive in subtler ways—in assumptions about status, in expectations about who belongs where, and in beliefs about whose choices deserve respect and whose do not. The irony is difficult to miss. Many of us rightly expect dignity, fairness, and equal opportunity in our own professional lives. We resist discrimination when it affects us. Yet we sometimes struggle to extend the same principles to those whose lives intersect with ours through work and service. What makes this particularly significant is that such attitudes are no longer confined to inherited social structures. They increasingly appear within gated residential complexes that pride themselves on education, professionalism, and progressive values.

The physical distance between people may have narrowed as they live within the same gated complexes, use common facilities, and participate in community events. Yet social distance often remains intact. Old assumptions continue to survive beneath the veneer of modernity and progress. We may share addresses without sharing perspectives. We may inhabit the same community while unconsciously maintaining invisible boundaries between those who belong and those who merely serve. The challenge before urban India is not merely to build better infrastructure, but to build more inclusive communities. Modern urban spaces bring together people from vastly different social and economic backgrounds. The real test is not the quality of their infrastructure, but their capacity to treat every individual with dignity. Progress is not measured only by rising incomes or professional success. It is also measured by our willingness to recognise the humanity of those whom society has traditionally placed on the other side of invisible social boundaries. Modern buildings can bring people closer together, but only mutual respect can make them a truly inclusive and compassionate community.

According to the passage, what was troubling about the suggestion that domestic workers should not use the same lifts as apartment owners?

@RankZen Banker

- a. It would slow down the lifts and cause inconvenience to apartment owners during peak hours.
- b. It revealed a hidden assumption that domestic workers, despite working there daily, belonged to a different and lower social category.
- c. It violated the building's fire safety regulations by restricting access to certain floors.
- d. It would discourage qualified domestic workers from taking up employment in the society.
- e. It showed that apartment owners were afraid of domestic workers using expensive shared facilities.

22. Questions

What puzzled the author about the reaction to the discovery that some domestic workers' husbands had criminal records?

- a. The residents immediately called the police without verifying the facts properly.
- b. The concern for safety was used to demand higher salaries for domestic workers.
- c. The actions of the husbands were used to cast suspicion on the women themselves, contradicting the principle of judging individuals on their own merits.
- d. The residents failed to report the matter to the appropriate authorities in time.
- e. The domestic workers were dismissed without being given a chance to explain their side.

23. Questions

According to the passage, what is the real test for modern urban communities?

- a. Building world-class infrastructure, smart roads, and high-rise apartments.
- b. Ensuring that all residents have access to equal amenities within gated complexes.
- c. Their capacity to treat every individual with dignity, regardless of social and economic background.
- d. Providing domestic workers with formal employment contracts and social security benefits.
- e. Using technology to manage residential societies more efficiently and transparently.

- e. Rapid and visible growth

25. Questions

@RankZen Banker

What is the irony the author points out in the passage?

- a. Educated people earn less money than domestic workers in many urban areas.
- b. People who demand dignity and fairness in their own professional lives often fail to extend the same principles to domestic workers.
- c. Gated residential complexes are more expensive to live in but offer fewer community activities.
- d. Urban India has better infrastructure than rural areas but worse social values.
- e. Domestic workers are often more qualified than the residents who employ them.

26. Questions

Choose the word most similar in meaning to 'CONFINED' as used in the passage?

- a. Encouraged
- b. Celebrated
- c. Restricted or limited to a particular place or group
- d. Originated from
- e. Transformed by

27. Questions

What is the central theme of the passage?

- a. Urban India's rapid economic development has made cities cleaner and more organised than before.
- b. Despite visible urban progress and education, social prejudice and discrimination against domestic workers quietly persist in modern residential communities.
- c. Domestic workers in urban India must be given legal protection to prevent exploitation by apartment owners.
- d. The rise of gated residential complexes has solved the problem of social inequality in Indian cities.
- e. Economic growth alone is sufficient to eliminate social prejudice over time.

28. Questions

Explanations:

1. Questions

Answer: A

Part (B) is incorrect.

(A) If the dynamic marketing team: Correct

This is the if-clause (conditional clause) introducing a hypothetical situation in the past. The noun phrase is grammatically correct.

(B) would have launched the campaign earlier: Incorrect

This sentence expresses an unreal past condition, which is the Third Conditional.

The structure is: If + Past Perfect (had + V3), Subject + would have + V3

Therefore, the if-clause should not contain "would have."

Incorrect: If the team would have launched...

Correct: If the team had launched...

(C) they would have captured a: Correct

The main clause of a third conditional correctly uses:

would have + past participle

"would have captured" is perfectly correct.

(D) much larger share of the market: Correct

The comparative adjective larger is correctly modified by much.

Examples: much better, much stronger, much larger, much higher

No error here.

2. Questions

Answer: B

Parts (B) and (D) are incorrect.

(A) Not only the principal: Correct

The correlative conjunction not only...but also is correctly used.

(B) but also the teachers was present: Incorrect

Error: Subject-Verb Agreement

@RankZen Banker

When subjects are joined by not only...but also, the verb agrees with the subject closest to it.

Nearest subject = teachers (plural)

Therefore,

Incorrect: was present

Correct: were present

Examples

Not only the manager but also the employees were satisfied.

Not only the employees but also the manager was satisfied.

(C) at the meeting to discuss: Correct

"To discuss" correctly expresses purpose.

No error here.

(D) about the new academic curriculum: Incorrect

The verb discuss is transitive, so it takes a direct object.

Therefore,

Incorrect: discuss about the issue

Correct: discuss the issue

Correct: talk about the issue

Correct: speak about the issue

Since the sentence already has “discuss”, about is unnecessary.

Correct Part: the new academic curriculum

3. Questions

Answer: D

Parts (B) and (C) are incorrect.

(A) The management committee has received: Correct

Management committee is a collective noun.

Here, it is treated as a single unit, so the singular verb has received is correct.

(B) many critical informations regarding: Incorrect

There are two errors in this part.

Error 1: informations

Information is an uncountable noun. It has no plural form.

Incorrect: informations

Correct: information

Error 2: many

Since information is uncountable, many cannot be used.

Use: much information, a great deal of information, a lot of information

Correct: much critical information

(C) the financial irregularities and are planning: Incorrect

The subject is The management committee, which is singular.

Therefore, the verb should also be singular.

Incorrect: are planning

Correct: is planning

(D) to initiate a thorough internal audit: Correct

Initiate an audit is a standard collocation.

Thorough internal audit is grammatically and contextually correct.

4. Questions

Answer: D

@RankZen Banker

Parts (A) and (D) are incorrect.

(A) The senior analyst invited my colleague and I: Incorrect

The verb invited takes an object. Therefore, the objective pronoun me should be used instead of I.

Correct: He invited me. He invited my colleague and me.

Incorrect: He invited my colleague and I.

Rule: Use I as a subject and me as an object.

Examples:

My friend and I attended the seminar. (subject)

The manager praised my friend and me. (object)

(B) to attend the international seminar: Correct

This infinitive phrase correctly expresses the purpose of the invitation.

(C) emphasizing that participating in such events: Correct

The participial phrase emphasizing properly refers to the senior analyst, and participating functions correctly as a gerund.

(D) helps in updating and expand our skills: Incorrect

There is a parallelism error.

After helps in, both verbs should have the same -ing form.

Incorrect: helps in updating and expand

Correct: helps in updating and expanding

Alternatively, omit in: helps update and expand our skills.

5. Questions

Answer: A

Part (C) is incorrect.

(A) By the time the auditing team arrives: Correct

By the time introduces a future time clause.

After by the time, we use the Simple Present Tense to refer to the future.

Examples:

By the time she arrives, we'll leave.

By the time the train reaches the station, it will be dark.

So arrives is correct.

(B) at the corporate headquarters tomorrow: Correct

@RankZen Banker

The phrase correctly specifies the place and time.

No grammatical error.

(C) the accountant will already finish: Incorrect

Here, the action of finishing the reports will be completed before the auditing team arrives.

To show one future action completed before another future action, we use the Future Perfect Tense.

Incorrect: will already finish

Correct: will already have finished

(D) compiling the financial reports for the clients: Correct

The verb finish is followed by a gerund (-ing form).

Examples: finished writing, finished preparing, finished compiling

Hence this part is correct.

6. Questions

Answer: D

In the given sentences, 'diversification' and 'confidence' at their current positions fail to impart valid meaning to the sentence, as well as 'valuation' and 'capital' at their current positions fail to impart valid meaning to the sentence, but interchanging them will make the given sentences both grammatically and contextually correct.

@RankZen Banker

Confidence fits with investor, as investor confidence is a common financial expression.

Companies raise capital, not valuation, through public offerings and debt instruments.

Diversification naturally collocates with investment portfolios.

Valuation is the correct term for assessing the worth of financial assets.

The correct sentences after re arrangement are:

I). Growing investor confidence in the domestic economy has encouraged companies to raise capital through public offerings and long-term debt instruments.

II). Prudent diversification of investment portfolios and careful valuation of financial assets enable investors to manage risk during periods of market volatility.

So, the correct answer is: d) A-C and B-D.

7. Questions

Answer: D

In the given sentences, 'liquidity' and 'inflation' at their current positions fail to impart valid meaning to the sentence, as well as 'transmission' and 'flexibility' at their current positions fail to impart valid meaning to the sentence, but interchanging them will make the given sentences both grammatically and contextually correct.

Decline in inflation gives the central bank greater flexibility in monetary policy.

Liquidity conditions is a standard economic term referring to the availability of money in the financial system.

Transmission mechanisms refers to the channels through which monetary policy affects the economy.

The correct sentences after re arrangement are:

I). A sustained decline in inflation has provided the central bank with greater flexibility to support economic growth without compromising macroeconomic stability.

II). Periodic adjustments in liquidity conditions and changes in transmission mechanisms influence the effectiveness of monetary policy across financial markets.

So, the correct answer is: d) A-C and B-D.

8. Questions

Answer: A

In the given sentences, 'encryption' and 'payments' at their current positions fail to impart valid meaning to the sentence, but interchanging them will make the given sentences both grammatically and contextually correct.

Digital payments improve the speed and efficiency of financial transactions.

Transaction efficiency is the correct collocation.

Encryption standards protect data by converting it into secure, unreadable forms.

Authentication mechanisms verify users' identities before granting access. @RankZen Banker

The correct sentences after re arrangement are:

I). The widespread adoption of digital payments has improved transaction efficiency, enabling businesses to reduce costs and serve customers more effectively.

II). Robust encryption standards and continuous authentication mechanisms are essential for safeguarding sensitive financial information from cyber threats.

So, the correct answer is: a) A-C

9. Questions

Answer: C

In the given sentences, 'innovation' and 'authentication' at their current positions fail to impart valid meaning to the sentence, but interchanging them will make the given sentences both grammatically and contextually correct.

Authentication protocols is the correct technical collocation because protocols are used to verify users' identities.

Encryption systems correctly refers to systems that protect data by encoding it.

Innovation in payment platforms is the appropriate expression, referring to technological advancements.

Penetration in rural areas refers to the increasing reach or expansion of services across rural regions, making the sentence contextually meaningful after the interchange.

The correct sentences after re arrangement are:

I). To encourage secure digital transactions, banks have strengthened authentication protocols and upgraded encryption systems to safeguard customer information against evolving cyber threats.

II). The expansion of banking penetration in rural areas and continuous innovation in payment platforms have accelerated financial inclusion and improved access to formal financial services.

So, the correct answer is: c) A-D

10. Questions

Answer: E

Customer authentication is the correct collocation (verifying a customer's identity).

Possibility of fraud is also the correct and natural expression.

Encryption upgrades refers to improving encryption methods or protocols to enhance security.

Continuous surveillance of banking platforms is appropriate for monitoring suspicious activities and cyber threats.

The sentences are:

I). To strengthen customer authentication, banks have introduced advanced verification systems that significantly reduce the possibility of fraud in digital transactions.

II). Regular encryption upgrades and continuous surveillance of online banking platforms have enhanced data protection against sophisticated cyber threats.

All the highlighted words are already in their correct places.

So, the correct answer is: e) No Correction required

11. Questions

Answer: C

Sentence 1: The word “stubborn” is incorrect. It cannot describe positive growth; words like “remarkable” or “rapid” would be appropriate. “Stubborn” implies obstinacy or resistance, not progress.

Sentence 2: The word “stubborn” is incorrect. A presentation cannot be “stubborn”; suitable words would be “impressive,” “compelling,” or “outstanding.”

Sentence 3: The word “stubborn” is correctly used to describe a person’s obstinate or unyielding refusal to change behaviour despite warnings, aligning with the word’s meaning of being inflexible or determined in a negative sense.

So, third sentence uses stubborn in a grammatically correct and contextually meaningful manner.

Therefore, option C) Only 3 is the correct choice.

12. Questions

Answer: A

Sentence 1: The word “exacerbate” is correctly used to mean making an already bad situation (tensions) worse, which aligns perfectly with the word's standard meaning.

Sentence 2: The word “exacerbate” is incorrect. It means to worsen a problem; one cannot “exacerbate” recovery (which is positive). The intended word is likely “accelerate” or “facilitate”.

Sentence 3: The word “exacerbate” is incorrect. It cannot describe a calm and positive approach; the correct word would be something like “measured”, “diplomatic”, or “prudent”.

So, first sentence uses exacerbate in a grammatically correct and contextually meaningful manner.

Therefore, option A) Only 1 is the correct choice.

13. Questions

Answer: D

Sentence 1: The word “attrition” is correctly used to refer to the gradual reduction in staff (employee turnover), which is a standard usage in business and HR contexts.

Sentence 2: The word “attrition” is correctly used to describe the gradual wearing down of enemy forces through sustained pressure, which aligns with its military meaning.

Sentence 3: The word “attrition” is incorrect here. A policy leading to economic recovery would not be described as “attrition” (which implies gradual loss or wearing down). Words like “austerity” or “reform” would be more appropriate depending on the intended meaning.

So, first and second sentences use attrition in a grammatically correct and contextually meaningful manner.

@RankZen Banker

Therefore, option D) Both 1 and 2 is the correct choice.

14. Questions

Answer: D

Sentence 1: The word “conspiracy” is incorrect. It refers to a secret plot or scheme, usually by people. It cannot be used for natural events like rains and winds. Words like “combination” or “coincidence” would be appropriate here.

Sentence 2: The word “conspiracy” is correctly used to describe a secret and unlawful plan by executives to manipulate records.

Sentence 3: The word “conspiracy” is correctly used in the legal sense - planning together to commit fraud.

So, second and third sentences use conspiracy in a grammatically correct and contextually meaningful manner.

Therefore, option D) Both 2 and 3 is the correct choice.

15. Questions

Answer: E

Sentence 1: The word “profound” is correctly used to describe a very deep and significant impact.

Sentence 2: The word “profound” is correctly used to indicate a deep or intense feeling of satisfaction.

Sentence 3: The word “profound” is correctly used to describe deep and extensive knowledge or insight.

All three sentences use the word “Profound” appropriately.

Therefore, option E) All are correct is the correct choice.

16. Questions

Answer: D

The paragraph discusses the Ministry of Ayush's latest initiative, the Yoga Park Portal, and how it aims to promote preventive healthcare and wellness through community participation.

The paragraph begins with Sentence B, which introduces the Ministry of Ayush and its ongoing efforts to promote traditional Indian health practices. Sentence A naturally follows by introducing the Ministry's latest initiative-the Yoga Park Portal.

Sentence D comes next because it provides additional information about the portal's launch and mentions that it complements the existing Yoga Sangam Portal. After the portal has been introduced and its launch explained, Sentence C logically elaborates on how the platform functions and who can use it to transform parks into wellness spaces.

Finally, Sentence E serves as the conclusion by highlighting the broader objective behind the initiative-shifting the focus from treatment to prevention and encouraging citizens to adopt yoga and meditation for long-term well-being.

So, the correct sequence is: B - A - D - C - E.

The third statement after rearrangement is sentence D.

@RankZen Banker

17. Questions

Answer: B

The paragraph discusses the Ministry of Ayush's latest initiative, the Yoga Park Portal, and how it aims to promote preventive healthcare and wellness through community participation.

The paragraph begins with Sentence B, which introduces the Ministry of Ayush and its ongoing efforts to promote traditional Indian health practices. Sentence A naturally follows by introducing the Ministry's latest initiative-the Yoga Park Portal.

Sentence D comes next because it provides additional information about the portal's launch and mentions that it complements the existing Yoga Sangam Portal. Finally, Sentence E serves as the conclusion by highlighting the broader objective behind the initiative-shifting the focus from treatment to prevention and encouraging citizens to adopt yoga and meditation for long-term well-being.

So, the correct sequence is: B - A - D - C - E.

The penultimate sentence in a paragraph is the one that appears just before the last sentence and serves as a bridge or transition to the final point. In this sequence, the penultimate sentence is Sentence C.

18. Questions

The paragraph discusses the Ministry of Ayush's latest initiative, the Yoga Park Portal, and how it aims to promote preventive healthcare and wellness through community participation.

The paragraph begins with Sentence B, which introduces the Ministry of Ayush and its ongoing efforts to promote traditional Indian health practices. Sentence A naturally follows by introducing the Ministry's latest initiative-the Yoga Park Portal.

Sentence D comes next because it provides additional information about the portal's launch and mentions that it complements the existing Yoga Sangam Portal. After the portal has been introduced and its launch explained, Sentence C logically elaborates on how the platform functions and who can use it to transform parks into wellness spaces.

Finally, Sentence E serves as the conclusion by highlighting the broader objective behind the initiative-shifting the focus from treatment to prevention and encouraging citizens to adopt yoga and meditation for long-term well-being.

So, the correct sequence is: B - A - D - C - E.

The introductory statement after rearrangement is sentence B.

In this sequence the second sentence is Sentence A.

21. Questions

Answer: B

a). Incorrect. The passage notes the argument was presented as 'practicality and convenience' - but then rejects this surface reasoning. The author's concern is the social assumption beneath it, not practical inconvenience.

b). Correct. The passage directly states: 'beneath it lay an assumption that certain people, despite working there every day, somehow belonged to a different category.' The author finds this underlying assumption troubling - not the logistical argument used to justify it.

c). Incorrect. Fire safety regulations are not mentioned in the passage. The issue is entirely social and attitudinal, not regulatory.

d). Incorrect. The effect on employment choices of domestic workers is not discussed. The passage focuses on what the suggestion reveals about the attitudes of the residents who made it.

e). Incorrect. Fear of damage to expensive facilities is not cited. The troubling aspect is social discrimination - the idea that domestic workers belong to a lower category of people.

22. Questions

Answer: C

a). Incorrect. Police involvement or fact-verification is not mentioned. The author's puzzle is about the logical leap from husbands' records to suspicion of the women.

b). Incorrect. Salary demands are not mentioned in this context. The passage focuses on how blame was transferred from husbands to wives - an issue of individual judgment and social bias.

c). Correct. The passage states: 'What puzzled me...was the assumption that the actions of those men somehow cast suspicion upon the women themselves. We routinely argue that individuals should be judged on their own merits, yet that principle often appears to weaken when applied across social and economic boundaries.'

d). Incorrect. Timing of reporting is not discussed. The author's concern is the unfair transfer of suspicion, not procedural delays.

e). Incorrect. Dismissal of workers without a hearing is not mentioned in the passage. The author reflects on the assumption made, not on what action was eventually taken.

23. Questions

Answer: C

a). Incorrect. The passage explicitly states: 'The real test is not the quality of their infrastructure' - ruling out roads and buildings as the measure of progress.

b). Incorrect. Equal access to amenities is not cited as the real test. The author's concern is about dignity, respect, and social attitudes - not physical access to facilities.

c). Correct. The passage directly states: 'The real test is not the quality of their infrastructure, but their capacity to treat every individual with dignity.' This is reinforced in the conclusion: 'only mutual respect can make them a truly inclusive and compassionate community.'

d). Incorrect. Formal employment contracts and social security are not mentioned in the passage. The author's focus is on attitudes and social distance, not legal or employment frameworks.

e). Incorrect. Technology for managing residential societies is not discussed anywhere in the passage.

24. Questions

Answer: D

a). Foundation Incorrect. A 'foundation' implies something deep and structural - the opposite of a veneer, which is thin and surface-level. The passage uses 'veneer' to suggest that modernity is only a superficial cover, not a solid base of real change.

b). Public announcement Incorrect. 'Public announcement' is entirely unrelated to the meaning of 'veneer'. The word refers to surface appearances, not communication.

c). Genuine and deep transformation Incorrect. 'Genuine and deep transformation' is exactly what the author argues has NOT happened. The veneer of modernity hides unchanged attitudes - it is a false appearance of change, not real transformation.

d). A thin, attractive surface that hides what lies beneath Correct. 'Veneer' literally refers to a thin decorative layer placed over a cheaper material to make it appear better. Figuratively, it means a superficial appearance that conceals a different reality beneath. In the passage, modernity and progress are described as a veneer - a surface show that masks the survival of old discriminatory attitudes underneath.

e). Rapid and visible growth Incorrect. 'Rapid and visible growth' describes pace and scale of development - not the deceptive surface quality that 'veneer' conveys.

25. Questions

Answer: B

a). Incorrect. No comparison of incomes between educated people and domestic workers is made in the passage.

b). Correct. The passage explicitly states: 'Many of us rightly expect dignity, fairness, and equal opportunity in our own professional lives. We resist discrimination when it affects us. Yet we sometimes struggle to extend the same principles to those whose lives intersect with ours through work and service.' This contradiction - demanding fairness for oneself while denying it to others - is the irony the author highlights.

c). Incorrect. The cost of gated complexes or the quality of their community activities is not discussed in the passage.

d). Incorrect. The passage does not compare urban and rural India's social values. The focus is entirely on attitudes within urban residential communities.

e). Incorrect. Qualifications of domestic workers compared to residents are not mentioned anywhere in the passage.

26. Questions

Answer: C

a). Encouraged Incorrect. 'Encouraged' means actively supported or promoted - the opposite of 'confined', which means restricted or held within limits.

b). Celebrated Incorrect. 'Celebrated' means praised or honoured. 'Confined' says nothing about appreciation - it refers to the boundaries within which something is contained.

c). Restricted or limited to a particular place or group Correct. 'Confined' means kept within certain limits or boundaries. In the passage, the author says discriminatory attitudes are no longer 'confined to' - meaning no longer restricted to - traditional inherited social structures. They have spread into modern educated communities as well.

d). Originated from Incorrect. 'Originated from' refers to source or origin - where something came from. 'Confined to' refers to where something is limited or contained, which is a different concept entirely.

e). Transformed by Incorrect. 'Transformed by' suggests change or conversion - unrelated to the meaning of 'confined', which refers to restriction of scope or reach.

27. Questions

Answer: B

a). Incorrect. Urban prosperity is mentioned only as context in the opening. The passage moves quickly to argue that visible progress has not eliminated social prejudice.

b). Correct. The passage uses three real incidents from a residential society to show that educated, successful people still hold discriminatory attitudes. It argues that economic progress does not automatically eliminate social prejudice and calls for inclusive communities built on dignity and mutual respect.

c). Incorrect. Legal protection for domestic workers is not discussed anywhere in the passage. The author's focus is on attitudes and social distance, not legal frameworks.

d). Incorrect. The passage says the opposite - that discriminatory attitudes are increasingly found within gated complexes that claim to hold progressive values.

e). Incorrect. The passage explicitly states: 'Economic progress, it seems, does not automatically eliminate social prejudice' - directly contradicting this option.

28. Questions

Answer: C

The correct spelling is deferred (de-ferr-ed). When a verb ending in a single consonant preceded by a single stressed vowel receives a suffix beginning with a vowel ('-ed', '-ing'), the final consonant is doubled. Since 'defer' is stressed on the second syllable (de-FER), 'r' doubles - deferred. Same rule applies: prefer - preferred, occur - occurred, commit - committed.

issuance - the action of supplying/issuing officially currency - system of money in use prevailing - existing at a particular time

29. Questions

Answer: A

The correct spelling is harassment (har-ass-ment) - only one 'r' but double 's'. The most common error is writing double 'r' by instinct. Root: harass (one 'r', double 's') - harassment. Memory tip: one Rabbit, two Snakes - h-a-r-ass-ment.

seriously - in a solemn/earnest manner internal - existing within an organisation

grievance - an official complaint

30. Questions

Answer: D

The correct spelling is sovereign (sov-er-eign). The correct sequence is: s-o-v-e-r-e-i-g-n. Memory tip: a SOVEReign REIGNS over a nation - both words share '-reign'.

renowned - famous and respected cautioned - warned about a possible danger

borrowing - taking money on the condition of returning it

31. Questions

Answer: C

The correct spelling is compliance (com-pli-ance). The suffix is '-ance' not '-ence' - derived from compliant - compliance. Rule: adjectives ending in '-iant' form nouns with '-iance' (compliant - compliance, reliant - reliance, defiant - defiance).

liabilities - financial obligations/debts meticulously - with extreme care and precision statutory - required or permitted by law

32. Questions

Answer: C

The correct spelling is hindered (hinder-ed). Unlike 'defer' or 'occur', the verb 'hinder' ends in two consonants ('-nd-'), so the final consonant is NOT doubled when adding '-ed'. The error here is dropping the second 'e' - writing 'hindred' instead of 'hindered'. Root: hinder + ed = hindered (no doubling, no letter drop).

perennial - lasting for a long/indefinite time

skilled - having ability and expertise expansion - the process of increasing in size or scope
